MARINE PARK

A 353-hectare oasis located in the sea directly in front of Ile Des Deux Cocos is the first Marine Park in Mauritius. Approximately 72 different corals and around 32 different species of fish can be found in the area.

Corals found can be up to 800 years old. In 1920, Sir Hesketh Bell advocated for Blue Bay to be designated as a protected area, following a survey that highlighted its rich marine biodiversity, including the remarkable variety of fish species and corals found in its waters.

THE VILLA

The enchanting 252-square-metre villa on Île des Deux Cocos was built by Governor Hesketh Bell in 1920, to enable him to have a venue for his private parties which could not be hosted in his official residence. The Moroccan Villa blended the best of British and Moorish architecture with a stunning Mauritian interior, proving very unique in Mauritius.

Each and every Friday prior to his arrival, a platoon of late HMS. Mauritius, based at le Chaland, would fly the Governor's flag, announcing his arrival to the island. The flag symbolised that no other visitors were welcome to the island with the exception of the Governor and his invitees who typically partied the weekend away. The Villa was named 'la villa des follies' at that time.

In the year 2000, the villa was refurbished through hotel project, Les Follies and was carefully restored to retain its original character. Highlights include a shaded Moroccan-style courtyard and a fragrant garden laden with bougainvillea, bordered with a wooden decked swimming pool.

From the moment one enters the Moroccan-style courtyard with its shady palm trees and softly-splashing fountain, one will definitely need to take a deep breath. A decadently furnished lounge and three beautifully appointed bedrooms, complemented on-trend sleigh beds, create an elegant and inviting retreat that is sure to catch the eye. The Villa is perfect for couples or a family of 6 adults with two children and can be booked exclusively, or visited on day excursions.

INCENTIVES & EVENTS

Totally secluded and with outstanding personal service, the range of activities alone will make your team feel like royalty. The experience begins from the moment you jet into the airport and are transferred to the island for a delicious breakfast, while your bags are whisked away to your LUX* Resort & Hotel of choice. Team-building activities include beach volleyball competitions, underwater treasure hunts or circuits around the island, followed by time out to swim, snorkel, or simply relax in style under the coconut palms on the beach.

The Villa is lit by candlelight as night falls with torches illuminating the pathways. Île des Deux Cocos is renowned for its themed evenings from Arabian nights, including authentic Moroccan riad with tents by the water's edge, to themed evenings at the circus.

Île des Deux Cocos offers an exclusive and romantic setting for an unforgettable wedding. Facing the Blue Bay Marine Park, pristine white-sand beaches, swaying palms and a turquoise lagoon create an idyllic backdrop for intimate ceremonies and elegant receptions.

Tailor-made wedding packages, the option to privatise the historic villa, refined cuisine, attentive service and personalised décor come together to create a truly unique celebration, where every detail reflects the beauty, elegance and timeless charm of a private island wedding.
